Sie Annual Conference - Iaere Special Session on Environment and Innovation

Massimiliano Mazzanti - The special session IAERE organized in Trento (October 25th 2014) at the Annual Conference of the Italian Economic Association (SIE), witnessed rich and various research lines, which represent the potentialities of environmental & natural resource economics, including the diversified inter disciplinary perspectives.

We here provide a brief summary of the session contents:

The paper by Mazzanti and Rizzo presents case study based evidence on the techno-organizational trajectories that EU sectors may put in place to cope with 2020-2030-2050 CO2 targets. The work complements modelling and quantitative analyses in the field of economics of innovation and climate change.

Andergassen and Sereno's paper presents theory and evidence on firm's strategies in front of natural disasters, with a case study on St. Lucia island. It integrates environmental economics theory, micro data analyses, and policy insights for a developing economy.

Gagliardi, Marin and Miriello give evidence on the employment related eco innovation effects, by using rich firm based panel data for Italy. They exploit various 'invention' indicators to assess employment effects, which seem to be significant and potentially larger than those of 'other' innovations. Economics of innovation, labor economics are here complements to environmental economics to provide high interest policy insights on a very hot topic in the current economic situation.

Finally, Auci and Vignani present evidence on water usage efficiency at regional level, and interestingly use ISTAT datasets. The work additionally shows the relevance of institutional cooperation - with ISTAT, Bank of Italy, Ministries, etc... - for the development and coherent research use of data sources.

The upcoming IAERE session at the SIE Conference next year will be publicized in early 2015. Have a look at IAERE website to save the date!
